Useful information if you're moving to Switzerland

About 7.5 million people live in Switzerland, which is a federal republic comprising 26 states, known as cantons. The country is completely landlocked – it's bordered by Austria, France, Germany, Italy and Liechtenstein. The capital of Switzerland is Bern, and the largest city is Zurich. Switzerland is multilingual and has four national languages. German is the main language spoken in the north, east and central areas of the country; French is spoken in the west, and Italian in the south. The fourth language, Romansh, is spoken only in one specific canton in the south east of Switzerland

The official name for Switzerland is Swiss Confederation. However, you may have seen its country code, which is CH, and been puzzled – the CH comes from the Latin name for Switzerland, which is Confoederatio Helvetica.

Switzerland is considered to be one of the richest and safest countries in the world, famous for its Swiss bank accounts and its fantastic Swiss Alps ski resorts. It is the watch making capital of the world and is also home to Nestle chocolate and the children's book "Heidi". Politically, Switzerland is known as a neutral country and it didn't take part in either World War I or World War II.

Most of the shops stay closed on Sundays in Switzerland because the Swiss employment laws ban working on a Sunday. However, family businesses run by the owner are allowed to open, as are the railway stations.

In Switzerland there are celebrations for National Day every year on 1st August. This is to commemorate the first Swiss Confederation back in 1291.
